SUHRCO Residential Properties, LLC

As Community Association Manager, Adam is responsible for managing a diverse portfolio of condominium and homeowner's associations. He provides oversight of the daily operations of association management including financial administration, vendor coordination, Board of Directors training, association compliance, asset and facility management, long term planning and community relations.

Adam graduated Cum Laude from Kings College where he received a Bachelor of Arts. He received his Master of Arts from Multnomah Graduate School in non-profit leadership. Adam went on to work in several non-profits working with youth and families in several countries, providing leadership, volunteer recruitment and training, coordination of relief programs, and developing ongoing support systems for a wide variety of personal needs.

Prior to coming to Suhrco, Adam spent 15 years serving in a local non-profit in the Seattle area, working as the Executive Director for six of those years. Having spent time as the president of the Board for his own condominium community, Adam made the decision to use his experience, leadership skills and knowledge of non-profit management to work with Suhrco as a Community Association Manager.

Adam and his wife have raised their two children in the Seattle area, and on their free time they enjoy playing with their two Great Danes, hiking, fly fishing, wine tasting, and spending evenings together as a family.
